

B.G. Bikers On The Road

The cross-country bikers from the Battle Ground Bike Club have been enjoying the U.S.A. at its best. The weather has cooperated and there have been only minor health problems. The group spent three nights at Laramie, Wyoming, and celebrated the 4th of July at Denver. The comment was made that the fireworks there did not compare with Vancouver's annual show.

Monday, July 5th was one of the bikers' poorer days for travel. They covered 85 miles of hill country against a head wind in 90° heat. They encountered an electric storm with rain, and bike problems slowed them down also - a broken chain and cable. The long day of pedaling didn't end until 8 p.m.
